

For Herbert, this work is more than an event—it's a lifelong mission.

"My dream is to see Christian leaders walking together, supporting one another as they do the work of the Lord," he says. "If the Church steps into its rightful place and models good leadership, Africa will never be the same."

This vision was first ignited during his time at African Christian College, where he received more than an education, but a calling.

"African Christian College opened my eyes to what is truly necessary to transform Africa. It taught me to think theologically, to lead practically, and to serve faithfully," Herbert reflects. "Today, I see the fruit of that investment in the lives of leaders across Zambia."

Herbert Mhango's story is one of impact, not only in his own ministry, but in the lives of countless others who are now empowered to lead their communities with purpose. It is also a testament to the transformative power of high-quality Christian education.
